The Ups and Downs of Social Media

Social media apps have changed how people communicate. They help us stay in touch with friends and know what is happening around us. However, social media also has some problems.

The Value of a Drop

Can you read Arabic without dots? It is very difficult. A social media campaign in Jordan asked people to try reading Arabic without dots. The message was written without dots, so it was hard to understand.

This message appeared on billboards in Amman and on social media. Many companies also removed the dots from their names. After three days, the message became clear.

The campaign was about saving water. It became very popular online and helped people learn how to save water. Studies showed that many people started checking their water use.

FOMO – A Modern Problem

How many times do you check your phone every day? Many people check their phones about 70 times a day. Some people spend many hours using social media.

Social media can be fun, but some people cannot stop using it. They check their phones all the time.

This can make them feel stressed. This problem is called FOMO. It means “Fear Of Missing Out.”

People with FOMO are afraid of missing something important or interesting online.
